

Late Night Writing

RUTGERS SASHP NEWSLETTER

Wednesday, Oct. 12, 2022

Dear SAS Honors Program Students,

This one goes out to all my fellow night-owls. I'm currently writing this opening blurb at 2:06 AM. And though it is mostly due to my chronic case of procrastination, I also admit that I've always been a creature of the night. As much I as I'd like to and as hard as I try, I can't be as productive before 11 AM as I am after 7 PM. You early-birds and morning-people have my total respect. I think my brain just uses the momentum of my day to charge up my creative prowess, which means it only hits 100% when the sun has already set. I think inspiration strikes when your awareness lines up with your imagination just right— and sometimes/many times, that's after the sun goes down. This is all just to say that if you're like me and you've been feeling guilty for your after-dark work hours, you're not alone. What I've learned from my habitual late night writing sessions (and they are habitual) is that it doesn't really matter when the work gets done. What really matters is that it gets done. Period. Just make sure that you're getting your 8-hours of sleep (or at least catching up on it during the weekends). That's a non-negotiable.

Don't sleep on these upcoming events! Learn about some great opportunities at the Career & Internships in Insurance Recruitment Event! Talk books at the October Summer Reading Committee Meeting. Plan ahead by attending the GSE Info Session. Make a sweet escape from your studies with Sweets in the Suites. Get your advising questions answered at the Passport to Student Success event. Apply for the Eagleton Undergraduates Associates Program. Take in a cinematic classic at the upcoming Colloquium Movie Night. Make friends in a festive way at the Halloween Speed Friending event.
