

Who Knows?

RUTGERS SASHP NEWSLETTER

Monday, Feb. 13, 2023

Dear SAS Honors Program Students,

Occasionally– and I mean occasionally– I'll write these opening blurbs so far in advance (i.e. a week earlier) that I can't help but feel super conscious of the fact that I'm writing to a future audience. A future self, even! You probably don't even realize it, but in the short span of only five days you have acquired so much more information that I have sitting in the parlor of 35 College Ave on this sunny Wednesday morning! In this way, this silly little newsletter blurb is almost like a time capsule of my mind at this particular hour on this particular day. That's mind-boggling to me. And, because of that, I have so many questions for you. Has it finally snowed? I'm guessing probably not. Valentine's Day is tomorrow– that came so quickly! Are your Val-/Pal-/Gal-entine plans set? As I'm writing this, the Super Bowl hasn't even happened yet! To which I have one important question: was Rihanna amazing? Okay, okay. Even if I don't necessarily consider myself a "sports person" I am also curious about which team won. Who knows? Well, I guess, you do. How's everything then?

You don't have to look too far into the future for these exciting events and opportunities! Apply for an internship at the Rutgers University Press! Gear up for a Mid-Semester Game Night with the Peer Mentor Program. Tune into an info session on education as a social science minor. Sign-up for the upcoming SASHP Coffeehouse. Rewind with the Monsters Inc. Movie Night!

Warmest Regards,
